Doesn't reward contract adds a selling pressure?

Reward contracts adds a small selling pressure to the chart as it needs to swap tokens to BNB in order for it to reflect BNB to holders. But it also supports a healthy chart that doesn't simply pump. It allows investors to hold their tokens without selling while still receiving funds.

How does rewards work?

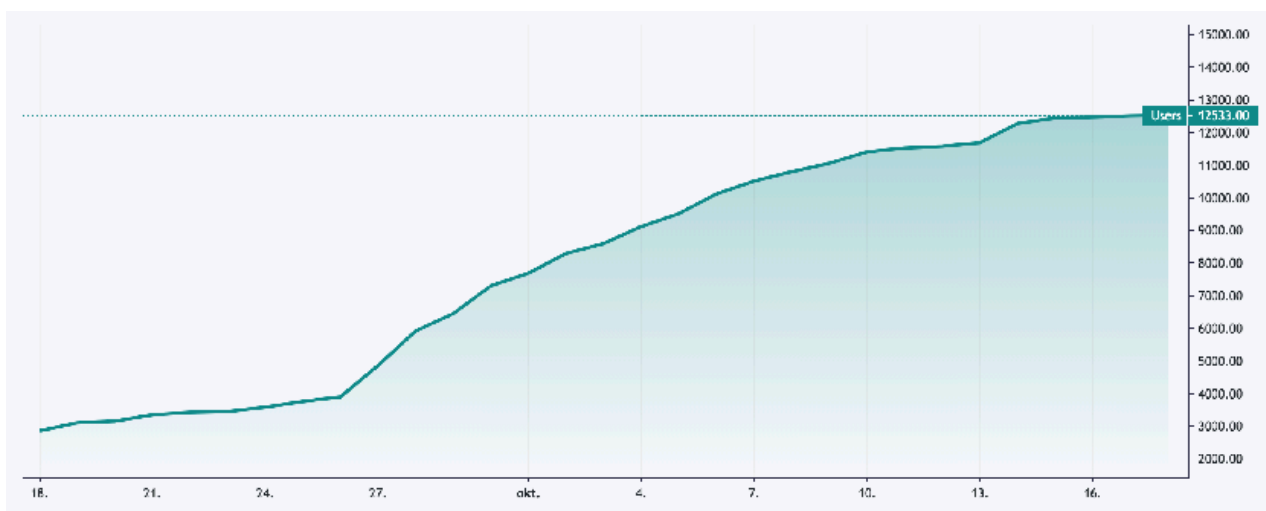

Rewards are automatically transferred on transactions to a set amount of wallets. Any single wallet may only receive automatic dividends every 24 hours.

On sell transactions the contract will sell the tokens held by the $SPACES contract and loop through eligible holders to transfer dividends.

A manual claim function is also available directly from the platform once a user has connected their wallet, which may be used as often as a user would want to.

03. The community

Growth of users

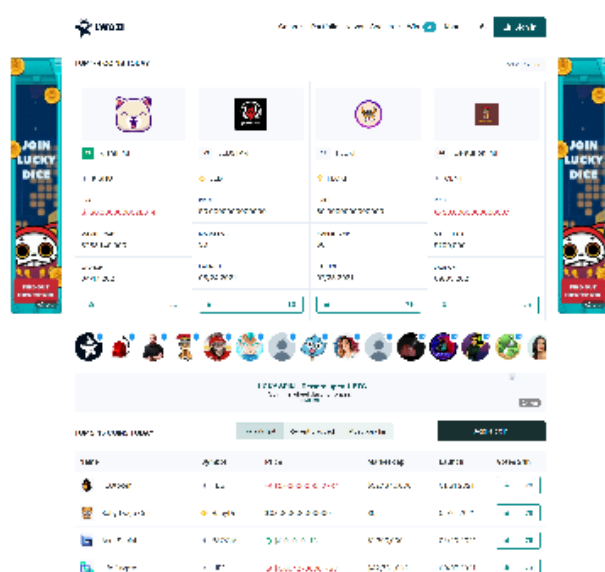

The user registration option was added to the platform on September 12th 2021. Since the user registration was added a total of 12,533 users have registered on the platform with a daily average growth of about 500 new users.
